Pole Sitter Not In Salinas; Where Has He Gone?

"Oh where, oh where has our pole-sitter gone, Oh where, oh where can he be?"

Campbell's Great Pole-Sitter Mystery expands like a perfect newspaper story. Each week a new mystery is added. First, How long can he stay up? Second, Why did he come down? Third, Where did he go? Fourth, Who was sitting on the pole with him in Salinas. And now, was he ever in Salinas, or did he vanish into the thin air that surrounds stratosphere explorers? Everything is up in the air.

One of the leading newsreel agencies sent a man to Salinas to make a newsreel picture of the great event. Lo, there was no pole-sitter. The Fox Theater people were asked. Pole-sitter? What pole-sitter? Ah, mystery. The newsreel man, like newsreel men the world over, became skeptical and wondered if there ever had been a pole-sitter, even in Campbell, the pole-sitting metropolis of the Santa Clara valley. He got in touch with H. M. Shadle, president of the chamber of commerce to find out if there was any pole-sitting down here. After being assured there was, he told the story of the Vanished Salinas Pole-Sitter.

P. S. If there is any further mysteries connected with this now famous case, we promise to track them down and present the lurid details to our eager, unsatiated readers. Selah.

KIWANIS GOLFERS IN INTERCLUB WIN OVER PALO ALTO

The Campbell Kiwanis golf team defeated the Palo Alto club team in a match played Sunday morning at the Rinconada course in one of the interclub matches. The first club match was won when the Campbell team defeated San Jose.

Roy Archibald 3	Christy 0
Ralph Hyde 2 1-2	Erwin 1-2
Dr. Fanning 2 1-2	Allen 1-2
Guy Farley 1	Canine 2
Frank Blaine 1	Powers 2
Carl Field 1-2	Goodenough 2 1-2

BUS SERVICE COMPLAINTS GAIN

Although continued protests are being received by members of the local chamber of commerce about the San Jose-Campbell bus service, no action has been taken by the local organization since their meeting, August 2, according to H. M. Shadle, president.

When asked if the Peerless Bus Company intended to take any action in the matter, Mr. Maxwell, the San Jose manager, declined to make any statement on the matter, at least until further word was heard from the main office in Oakland.

Mrs. Amelia Merrill is recovering from a severe illness, suffered last week.

Woman's Service Club Opens Fourth Annual Thrift Campaign Here

The Young Women's Service Club will hold their fourth annual Thrift Sale next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, August 17, 18 and 19 at the Ainsley Cafeteria. Any contribution from interested friends of this worthy club will be welcomed, particularly clothes, shoes furniture, dishes, even old papers and magazines. The cafeteria will be open to receive the articles on Tuesday evening. If unable to bring them, please call Mrs. W. N. Lloyd or Miss Winnie Grizzle, and they will be called for.

The Service Club was formed nearly four years ago, and has met a real need in the community. The following list of accomplishments shows something of what this group of women are doing:

Flowers, gifts and letters to invalids and others,	$20.00
Boy Scout Building and Campfire Girls dishes	$37.00
Community work, such as milk for children, Xmas boxes, help for individuals, etc.	$116.00
Community Chest	$30.00
McKinley Orphanage	$15.00
Church repairs and equipment	$194.00
M. E. Church budget	$150.00

This does not represent in a number of cases the actual value of the work done, as it shows just the money spent for raw materials. It does not take into account the donations for the forty or more children being fed at school, once a week during the school year, and other worthy activities.

Since the work of the club is so largely financed by the annual Thrift Sales, and the amount asked for each article so small that it is necessary that there be many donations. Please give your closets a thorough going over, and give the discards to the Thrift Sale, was the appeal made by leaders on the Service Club.

Former Resident Dies In Santa Clara Sat.

Mrs. Amelia A. Soares, for many years a resident of Campbell, died in Santa Clara last Friday, after a brief illness.

The funeral was held Monday morning from the A. W. Nuttman funeral home and from the Catholic church at Burbank, where a requiem mass was held.

Mrs. Soares was a native of Portugal, but settled in Campbell many years ago. She was the widow of Manuel Soares and mother of Mrs. A. R. Victorino of Gilroy and Mrs. A. R. Silva of San Jose. She was a member of the Santa Clara Council, S. P. R. S. I.

Party Held Here For Mrs. Geo. Ninnis

In compliment to Mrs. Geo. L. Ninnis, a former resident of Campbell, Mrs. W. W. Williams entertained at an afternoon party Wednesday in her home on Rincon Ave. Campbell. Mrs. Ninnis who made her home on Rincon Avenue for many years, is now living in Willow Glen, and the party was in the nature of a surprise for her. A delightful afternoon was enjoyed by the group of friends who later shared the pleasure of a tea. Those present included Mrs. Geo.

"Not a New Car" Pleads Hyde As Paint Job Attracts

"No, I haven't a new automobile, and will you please put something in your paper to that effect," pleaded Ralph Hyde in The Press office yesterday. "Wherever I go my friends want to know where and when I got my new car."

Hyde's car was in a wreck recently and was badly damaged. Naturally, it was insured and the insurance company put in running condition, rebuilt it and gave it that flashing cream and green paint job that has all his friends thinking it was a new car. Now the truth can be known. It is the same old car with a beauty treatment.

But Hyde does not recommend the promiscuous smashing of cars, just to get a good overhauling and a new coat of paint, even though a fully insured car would get just that.

CAMPBELL CADDIES AID IN WIN OVER ALAMEDA RIVALS

Campbell golfers played a large and successful part in the victory of La Rinconada caddies over those of the Alameda Golf Club and the Hillview club. The matches were held at the Alameda club last Monday and were in the form of team matches.

The following are the results of Campbell caddies activities: Bud DeSelle and Martin Shadle halved their match with Otto Meckler and L. Olandt, of Hillview; Melvin DeSelle teamed with Bill Corey lost to H. Anderson and Harold Butts of Hillview, 2 to 1, but redeemed themselves by defeating Earl Sandberg and Douglas Gardner of Alameda, 2 1-2 to 1-2; Bud DeSelle and Jack Phelps halved their match with Ray Cooper and Dick Holden of Alameda, 1 1-2 to 1 1-2.

CAMPBELL GOAL REACHED AS STATE DRIVE EXTENDED

Despite the failure of the prune pool drive to go over the top, and thus necessitating a ten day extension, local leaders in the campaign were jubilant as they surveyed the last minute results. Santa Clara county alone brought in 5,029 more tons yesterday, to raise their total to the startling figure of 93.09 per cent.

The Campbell district barely reached their quota with an 85 per cent of the acreage signed up, but only 60 per cent of the growers signing contracts, according to figures given to The Press late this afternoon by the Prune Industry headquarters.

Mr. Schuman, head of the publicity division of the drive, told The Press representative of the good work done by the Campbell committee in putting this district over the top, and expressed the confidence of the prune headquarters over the ultimate success of the drive. "We feel that the necessary 25,000 or 30,000 tons still needed to put the pool in operation will be forthcoming during the next ten days. There is a feeling that the growers have really wanted the pool to succeed all along but did not wish the responsibility for inaugurating it. And now that it is practically a success, they will be far more willing to join and put it over. Now that these doubtful growers have seen what their choice involves, they will make that choice voluntarily", Schuman said.

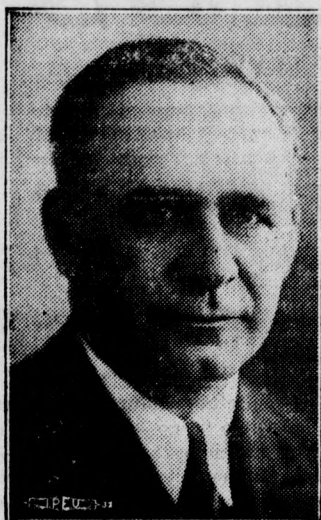

The ten day extension of the drive was made possible when the participating packers gave their consent to the extension in an emergency meeting yesterday in San Francisco.

Yesterday, the last day of the regular drive found the prune headquarters swamped with signed contracts, as county after county sent in their last minute tonnage. San Mateo joined Santa Clara in going over the top with a rush as they signed 89 per cent late yesterday. Mendocino county reported 87 per cent, San Benito, 96, Tehama, 89, and nearly every other prune growing county rushing in large signed acreage. But the spurt, though welcome, came just a few days too late to overcome the delayed signing of the past two months.

Hugh Hersman, state campaign chairman, urged campaign workers and their organizations throughout the state to immediately set down to work to get the remaining tonnage while the enthusiasm is still high and while the goal is in sight. In a statement issued at midnight last night, Hersman asked for the further efforts of all and promised that with it, the prune pool would be a success.

"No one wished to assume the responsibility for the chaotic condition that would follow to the prune industry from an announcement that the campaign was over; that the independent growers had failed to stabilize the industry. Such an announcement would be a shock and a disappointment to the business interests of the state who have so loyally supported the movement. The extension agreed on this evening has given the campaign a real opportunity to secure the necessary tonnage. The fate of the industry is still in the hands of the independent growers."

NOW IS THE TIME—

It is still early, but it is never too soon to start thinking of politics. Within four months the people of America will exercise their great prerogative and send to Washington the men and women who will govern us for the next years.

Never has it been so important to select carefully and wisely. Never has it been so necessary to vote without hate or prejudice. If America ever needed the full support of its intelligent people, it is now that we have reached the great crisis in our nation's life. It will be during the next four years that the answer to the problem of our very existence will be answered. If capitalism is to fall of its own weight and some other form of government is to take its place, the next four years will clearly show that tendency. But if our form of government, that form valiantly fought for and tenaciously held for over 150 years, if that form is to again rise triumphantly over its petty defamers it will be because the voters of the nation have chosen wisely.

The Press believes in the American people and their ability to weather this crisis as they have all others in the past. We believe that the American people, after listening to all sides will choose the men who have shown the greatest ability to lead us through the morass of depression and fear.

The Press advocates the candidacy of Herbert Hoover for president, Samuel Shortridge for senator, and Arthur Free for congressman. Each one has done his duty as he saw it—and they saw it well. All three of them believe in the American principle of rugged individualism and the right of each citizen to control his own destiny, unhindered by the despotic rule of a dictator.

But looking facts in the face, as we must, it is clearly discernable that there will be plenty of opposition to all plans to put these courageous and efficient men back into office. There will be a struggle because, during any period of hard times, there will be a certain class of people who avidly lay the blame on whoever happens to be handy, and the handiest of all recipients of brick bats are those in office. No matter what the cause of the hard times happens to be, the defamers will blame it on the office holders. And they are able, by specious and facile tongues, to convince that large group of casual voters who sheep-like follow the lead of the demagogue.

The battle in the case of Hoover is on a broad, fairly well-outlined platform which will be taken up here from time to time during the campaign. But the fight of Senator Shortridge and Congressman Free is complex, involving as it does, both national and local affairs. They have both worked hard for California and yet have not failed to consider the welfare of the nation as a whole. They need no long-winded defense, for they can well stand on their accomplishments in congress. It is only necessary to point out those accomplishments to the few voters who have listened a bit too much to the blandishments of the opposition candidates who promise so much, accomplish so little, defame so readily and talk so freely.

Shortridge and Free are up for re-nomination at the primary election this month. They should finally be renominated but it won't do to be over confident. Though they are clearly "the class of the field," the opposition is harvesting the discontent. The sound citizens who believe it necessary to continue the policies of the present government as the only possible way out of the depression must come out in full strength to insure victory for these two faithful workers. Wholeheartedly, the Press asks you to do your utmost to see that these two candidates receive the largest possible majority and thus show the opposition exactly how we feel about our public servants. Remember, Aug. 30 is the day on which we may show our faith in our government.

ROAD DOLLARS FOR LABOR

The bulk of the money to build roads is spent for labor, either on the job or in the preparation of materials.

More of the road dollar goes to labor when comparatively inexpensive roads are built than in the case of $40,000 a mile super-highways. The secondary farm-to-market road is thus the best means of providing employment—and at the same time it is the road we most need. Rural areas have, largely, been left outside of the good roads movement in the past. Thousands of farms and villages are situated within a short distance of fine modern highways—with no means of reaching them during bad weather.

When all-weather, bituminous-surfaced roads can be secured at from $3,000 to $6,000 a mile, road building might be called insurance for social and economic progress in the future. It results in better business, stimulated agriculture, a fuller life for millions of people. And at this time, with material prices at the lowest levels in many years, and with a vast army of men in need of work, it produces better fruits than at any other time within living memory. Our own district has been very fortunate in the matter of roads, but many adjacent communities are not so well off.

BOOKS

Genghis Khan: Emperor of All Men, by Harold Lamb.

"Seven hundred years ago a man almost conquered the earth. He made himself master of half the known world, and inspired mankind with a fear that lasted for generations.

"In the course of his life he was given many names—the Mighty Manslayer, the Scourge of God, the Perfect Warrior, and the Master of Thrones and Crowns. He is better known to us as Genghis Khan.

"Indeed it is difficult to measure him by ordinary standards. When he marched with his horde, it was over degrees of latitude and longitude instead of miles; cities in his path were often obliterated, and rivers diverted from their courses; deserts were peopled with the fleeing and dying, and when he had passed wolves and ravens often were the sole living things in once populous lands."

Thus opens the tale of the mightiest conqueror of all history. I have taken the reviewer's usual (and weakest) prerogative and quoted extensively. And I offer the usual excuses, it is the best possible way of showing the author's purpose and style and it furnishes the reviewer with the quickest but laziest way of inducing the reader to get the book.

Little is known of Genghis Khan. He accomplished so much, conquered so vast a territory, subjugated and killed so tremendous a horde of people, frightened all of Europe, ruled most of Asia and gave to the world a vision of the heights to which man (as a military machine) can reach that his name has become one of great mystery, almost equalling, in the material world, what Leonardo da Vinci's has come to signify in the world of the spirit.

Thundering from China to the Mediterranean, from the Top of the World to the Indian Ocean, this barbaric nomad destroyed high and beautiful civilizations the while he was creating history. Whatever our private opinion of Genghis Khan's morality happens to be, the account of his almost unbelievable victories makes fascinating reading, especially when written by so pleasant a writer as Harold Lamb. This man was never defeated, he conquered more land and killed more people than Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon combined. He created a legal code, The Yassa which rivaled the Code Napoleon, and he left an empire that lasted longer than the others. It was his grandson, ruler of the conquered Cathay, who is known to us as Kubila Kahn, mostly through the travel tales of Marco Polo. But Kubila was never the scourge, never the military genius that his grandfather was.

This book is fascinating reading and it is promised that once started it will be close to impossible to set it down until the last of the well-documented notes are read.

To those of us who, for one reason or another, (and there are many reasons, you know) find themselves interested in the many strange races of people that have, from time to time, inhabited the earth (such interest, of course, if carried to the point of study, results in anthropology) this book offers fascinating collateral reading, though far from scholarly or meticulous accuracy.

But don't let its scientific side frighten you. The fact that it is a true story merely adds further wonder to an epic unsurpassed by any fiction writer since Homer. It opens still another new and distant world to readers bound close to Campbell and California and gives them a chance to roam the Asian steppes with Mongol hordes, battling the fierce Seljuk Turks, the Russian princes, the Cathayans, the Kharezmian Muhammadans,

KIWANIS NOTES
By Heck

Local Kiwanians were given some pertinent pointers Tuesday by Attorney D. T. Jenkins in his talk on "The Cost of Crime". Retrials, courts, prisons, the loss in fines and in the earning capacity of criminals to society and relatives becoming public charges were among the points discussed. He suggested the change of law to permit a three-fourths jury conviction in criminal cases, except those involving capital punishment. He pointed out that the enforcement of laws and the capture of criminals could be greatly facilitated by the co-operation of the citizenry, as is so often the case in England.

BOOKS FOR THE WEEK

Mexico: A Study of Two Americas, by Stuart Chase. This is an appraisal of two civilizations, with the advantage given to the land that has the time to take things easily and contemplate the soul. It also gives a surprisingly well written and informative account of Mexico.

Tristram, by Edwin Arlington Robinson. A narrative poem of much beauty and great dexterity. It tells the ever-new story of Tristram and the two Isolts. Surely, any poem that ends with this is one of the major achievements of American poetry:

"And there was nothing alive but white birds flying, Flying and always flying, and still flying, And the white sunlight flashing in the sea."

Bardelys The Magnificent, by Rafael Sabitini. A swashbuckling, highly colored account, in Sabitini's best manner. A sure cure for timidity, and the only advantage to insomnia.

A Son of the Middle Border, by Hamlin Garland. The story of one of the more literate of our later pioneers, and the first of a series of autobiographies that, in their entirety, form a clear picture of the attitudes, thoughts and writings of America during the end of the last century.

Shadows on the Rock, by Willa Cather. The latest full length novel of one of America's better novelists. Blocked in subdued shades, competently written, it is a fragile story of old Quebec, under the French rule.

(From the Campbell Library)

for the day.

Lots of form next week. Rev. C. E. Irons of the Methodist church will speak on "American Morale" and Rev. Jos. H. Bennett of the Congregational church will be chairman. Herold Morton will lead in the hymn tong sing.

"This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." John 15:12

Asilomar

by Rev. J. H. Bennett

This word is music to many minds. How many can ever forget the mystic loveliness and the inspiring fellowship of that place "Amidst the pines and beside the sea."

The occasion of which I speak is the Annual Conference of the Young Peoples Organizations of Northern California Congregational Churches. To this I went, both as a member of the faculty and as a Counselor for the tent-house of College men. There were 250 registrations consisting of upper high school and college grades.

My offices at this conference again gave to me the joy of meeting youth in its natural setting. They were there because they wished to be. They were voluntary students desiring to be impressed and also ready to express. In the class room, on the beaches, the playing grounds or in the tent houses at night when all lights were supposed to be out and every one asleep, one was able to meet this younger generation in the light of reality.

My class work was amongst the high school age of which I had 60 in attendance. I can say little of the greatness of these younger people except that amidst all the seriousness of their studies they found plenty of room for fun. Their problems are common ones and their desire to have them solved is as sincere as that of any former generation.

Before this group and as part of the course, I presented 22 major problems for today and asked them to carefully chose six which they considered to be of the greatest moment.

They are as follows and in order of their selection:

- (1) To rebuild a moral and ethical code understandable to the Christian youth of today.
- (2) To consider the question of Science and its relation to the practises and beliefs of today.
- (3) To discover for themselves just what the religion of Jesus is.
- (4) To understand the relationship of the sexes in a wholesome social life.
- (5) To make younger people's organizations more effective.
- (6) To determine the choice of a life's work.

Each of these suggests a healthy outlook and is thoroughly in accordance with any other normal high school group.

Much of my time was spent in meeting individuals or groups from this age division, endeavoring to answer their problems. I am happy to have the memory of many inspiring confidences.

Any tent house counselor has a big job on his hands. Vigorous fun and horse play must proceed by the very law of nature. To attempt to control by the external laws of "Thou shalt not" by the prohibitions or enforcements is to invite worse than disaster. Some of my happiest moments during those days were spent with the college men during the late hours of the night, it may have been later, as we lay talking and vaguely expecting sleep. What I learned would be too great for the space allotted to me here. But a few things can be said.

(1) The field of psychology is still waiting for an interpreter of the meaning of the language of modern youth. Enough.

(2) The bewilderment of this age group, intellectually, is easily understood when one remembers the changing thought-life around them. But the warm personal response of these men, to a vital religious appeal is as fundamental as to any other generation. Congregationalists challenge their youth, believing that nothing is safe from harm that is not understood; that ignorance is not honoring God; that "There is more real faith in honest doubt, believe me, than in half the creeds." Among the presentations of the world's religion a place was found for Rabbi Coffee of Oakland who gave us a very unsettling challenge from Judaism.

(3) Much is said of the breakdown of the American Morale. I can only say of this cross-cut of American youth that they were as responsive to control as any earlier generation of which I had knowledge. But such control had to inspire not from fear of consequences but from within their own personalities in answer to their recognition of a just claim.

With them, freedom to feel their own way is the inevitable outcome of the condition that they find facing them in this world. To say this condition is not one of their own making is no compliment to we who are fathers

What kind of a world will the youth of today make of the problematic tomorrow? The answer to this came into my mind as I sat through the closing Communion service at the close of the last session, Friday evening. It was a message of hope. The beautiful Chapel was lit with the soft light of many candles, in the rear of the building was a lighted Cross reflecting its image seemingly across sand dunes and ocean, through a magnificent window. This light of the Cross was a fitting symbol and worthy setting to the youthful voices that spoke that evening. Their words were not of the pietist nor of the professional religionist, but just the words of God's normal youth expressing amidst the beauty of Asilomar the inspirations that had been stirred in the depths of their souls.

Christ's Prophecies

Told By Lee Neil

When will Christ come the second time? This question was answered by Christ Himself 1900 years ago and His answer was presented by Evangelist J. Lee Neil at the community hall August 7.

With prophetic glance Christ saw and described briefly the great period of persecution of Christians when more than 50,000,000 were killed. In history this period is known as the "Dark Ages." Immediately at the close of this period (Matt. 24:29) Christ said He would give signs in the Sun, Moon and Stars of his coming. The persecution ended about 1776. The finest sign appeared on May 19, 1780 when the Sun and Moon were supernaturally darkened. The other

The Cub boys are invited to meet with Mr. Bennett tomorrow at 2 P. M. for games, in the scout hall.

Love

by Mrs. A. C. Bohrman

Love has been declared the greatest force in the world. How cold and hard every circumstance would become without the softening influence of love.

The Christian religion is founded upon love, for "God is love" and we see the expression of His love for us as we read John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." One can never fathom a love like this—such love for mankind! "But God commendeth His love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. 5:8.

And as He loves us, so He commands His followers to love one another: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." John 15:12.

sign (falling stars) came Nov. 13, 1833 as recorded by scientific journals of that time. According to Neil, Christ said that the generation of people who saw these signs would not all die until He came the second time. The youngest of that generation are 99 years old, yet some will live to see Christ come the evangelist affirmed.

"The Future," social, political, and industrial, is the subject Thursday August 11.

Sunday Aug. 14 a lecture on "The Word that Wrecked Nations" will be given. The evangelists expect to show that the destiny of modern as well as ancient nations has been declared.

BELOW appear the names of the professional men and Santa Clara county official leaders who have, by their endorsement and support, made possible this department of the Campbell Press . . . Voluntarily they have identified themselves with the pleasurable task of building the community around the church, which is recognized as the pivot point of our social, economic and political structure.

Continuing, Hersman said, "I appeal to all those who have not yet signed the growers' contract to see that their tonnage is placed, without delay, alongside the tonnage of their neighbors and friends in order that the benefits of orderly marketing, intelligent advertising and necessary stabilization are put into operation in the prune industry."

It was decided that the work will be mostly concentrated in the next ten days on the counties with the largest remaining unsigned tonnage, including Butte, Colusa, Napa, Solano, Sonoma and Tulare, and in an endeavor to make Santa Clara county go over the top one hundred per cent.

C. C. COTTRELL

TO HAVE been born and reared in Santa Clara County, one of the world's richest agricultural regions, to have spent summer after summer working on the farms and orchards of this county, and to have served the rural residents of Santa Clara County for years in private and public life are experiences which C. C. Cottrell counts among the privileges of his life in this Valley of Heart's Delight. His frequent association with groups in rural districts, covering many years, show the esteem he holds for the farm, the farmer and the soil. He knows farm problems and he understands the rural point of view. The farmer will find him a courageous advocate of agricultural interests as Assemblyman, Thirty-first District.
